

London International Disputes Week 2022

London International Disputes Week (LIDW) celebrates London as a leading centre for handling international dispute resolution and is taking place this year between 9th and 13th May. LIDW22 is a hybrid event attracting audiences from jurisdictions globally.

On Friday 13th May, 12:00 – 14:00, Matthew Lavy will be on a panel discussing crypto disputes.

Investment and interest in cryptocurrencies, virtual assets, and other blockchain-related technologies have exploded over the past decade. Yet as the “virtual” and “crypto” asset class has expanded, regulatory, legal, and risk-management constructs have not kept pace and remain in flux. All stakeholders, businesses, regulators, and investors are facing the growing pains of this new asset class and its related technologies in an uncertain, volatile environment. This session will explore the crypto ecosphere and dispute landscape arising from this emerging space.

Speakers

Matthew Lavy, 4 Pump Court
James Collins KC (chair)
Ryan Rubin, Ankura
David McIlroy, Forum Chambers
John Lee, Travers Smith

To find out more and register

Click here